Pipeline Management for Sustainability Duration

Over the past 18 months, we have experienced one of the most significant and prolonged shifts in the property market nationwide since the Global Financial Crisis. This shift has made it extra challenging for agents to close deals, highlighting the vulnerability of their businesses without a suitable structure to withstand difficult market conditions. In this new environment, agents and principals increasingly seek ways to create sustainability and reliability in their operations. While the importance of pipeline management for sales agents is universally acknowledged, it is surprising how often agents are unfamiliar with their pipeline numbers or lack an effective management system. Effective pipeline management is crucial to an agent's ongoing success and longevity. This training session is designed to provide agents and principals of all experience levels with a simple yet highly effective system to categorise and manage potential listings. It can be daunting to look at your database without knowing where your next listing will come from or how to manage it more effectively. The Relationship Between Structure and Sustainability: Understanding how simple systems and procedures contribute to long-term business stability.
